STRIVE for a better future: communities and civil society resilience in Armenia (STRIVE) aims to improve the resilience, sustainability, accountability, and capacity for innovation of Armenian civil society organisations (CSOs). This will enable them to play a pivotal role in raising awareness, deepening democracy, and serving constituencies in Armenia, especially vulnerable populations.

STRIVE will be strongly grounded in local communities—involving grassroots CSOs and civic groups throughout Armenia. It will be balanced geographically and thematically, focused on community development, women's rights, people with disabilities, green transitioning, and youth. The Project will help mentioned Rights-Holders become active participants in positive community development initiatives through improved skills, communication, and engagement mechanisms including blended leadership skills training, grassroots-led civic initiatives, and an emergency fund. CSOs will benefit from overall increased organisational capacity of civil society in Armenia, improved mechanisms for capacity building, peer-to-peer mutual support and networking. The Project will provide targeted financial support to CSOs and civic-initiative groups to implement organisational development and grassroots-led initiatives.
